A one size fits all approach in this area places a huge burden on smaller, less well-resourced local governments. It may be possible, for example, to simply do away with the Corporate Business Plan and have a Strategic Community Plan feeding into annual Operational Plans or similar.

IPR sets the long-term view what should be achieved for the community and how the community's future should look like. Having such a long-term view there is the risk of interference by LG elections and other changes to the governance and management of the community. Therefore, the IPR needs to be shielded from those interferences to ensure stability and continuous improvement for the local community. This guiding principle is paramount and needs to be legislated as to instil confidence in the community when it comes to governing and administering.

Q16 What should the role of the community be in Integrated Planning and Reporting?

To be actively involved in the development of the Strategic Community Plan	Yes
To provide feedback to the local government on Draft Strategic Community Plans and Corporate Business Plans	Yes
To be notified of a local government's plans and reports (for example, publication of these documents on the local government's website)	Yes
To assess the local government's success in achieving the priorities identified in the Strategic Community Plan.	Yes

Integrated Planning and Reporting

Q17 Should all local governments have to meet the following community engagement requirements when developing their IPR documents?

A minimum number of people or percentage of people involved in the engagement process	Yes
Ensure that community engagement is representative of the community's diverse population	Yes
Demonstrate the community has been engaged in the development of plans	Yes
Demonstrate the community has been consulted on the completion of draft plans	Yes
Other (please specify):	LG planning processes, and all activities should be well advertised - not in the LG advertising column in the back of the local paper or WAN where most people do not look. In fact many people do not even read newspapers either in hard copy or on line. Local governments should communicate with residents via email and for very important matters such as strategic planning proposals, via hard copy mail. Many people do not know they can participate in local government because this is not brought to their attention.

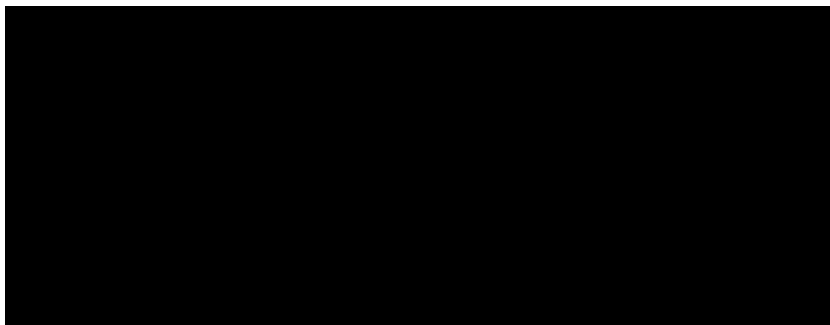

Q18 Should community engagement requirements be the same for all local governments? Yes

Many people are apathetic about politics and their participation in the political process. Unfortunately they do not comprehend that their lives are deeply integrated in political process and their lack of participation has the potential to adversely effect them. Politics and the process of government should be a compulsory subject in all school curriculum. The state government via local governments should be more proactive in encouraging and interesting people in participatory politics.

Many people are only dimly aware, if at all about this local government reform process. This should be continually widely advertised in newspapers and television. The government has failed to make this prominent enough, which makes one cynical about how genuine it is about public participation.

- The additional tasks and expectations required for the establishment and ongoing review of IPR is significant, with no additional funding or resources being made available for the process.

-The IPR review process must be structured to meet to needs of the smaller less resources LGA's and not be based on a "One-Size-Fits-All" basis it has been since its inception.

My observation is this extract is only partly true: "The council sets the local government's strategic and policy directions and makes the final judgement call on the best balance between aspirations and affordability."

To me it appears the Council is "guided" to strategic and policy directions provided by LG staff. Somehow the Council needs more, better, accurate information to be truly independent of its own LG. Perhaps LG or State funding of a community expectations group.

Of many of the legislative reforms of the 1995 Act, the IPR process has probably had one of the most significant impacts on the industry as a whole and has encouraged and promoted long term decision making and sound asset management. This has been a benefit to communities' state-wide.

Performance reporting is the next phase in the introduction of the IPRF and much more difficult than the planning part. However, many planning documents are not well structured indicating the need to develop skills in the industry. This will be paramount when developing effective performance management and reporting approaches that are useful to the organisation and the community.

Community feedback is not required on the Corporate Business Plan as it is seen as an internal operating document and is the operational aspect of the Strategic Community Plan.

"Local governments should be required to publish measures of success in implementing their long-term and operational plans." Agreed. Development of appropriate lead and lag indicators should be mandated as part of the development of the long term plans and should be reported against.

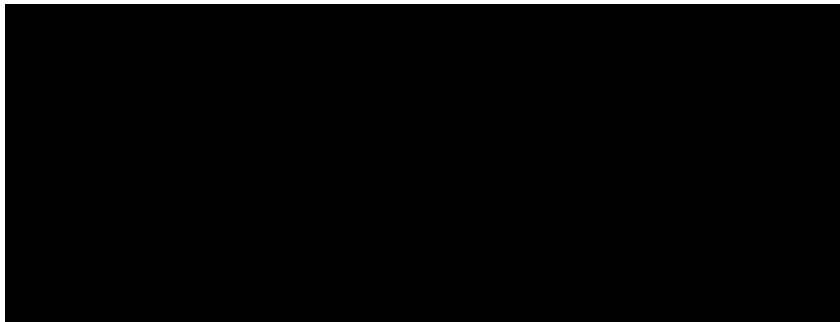

"Local governments should be required to publish measures of success against uniform key performance indicators." Whilst there are some consistent indicators around financial performance and legislative compliance, every local government has individual issues that may be more relevant and scope must remain for the development of indicators around these local issues.

"The State Government should use local government Integrated Planning and Reporting documents to inform policy and service delivery."

Local government IPR documents should be aligned with State Policy and whilst they could be used to inform service delivery requirements, this should be an influencing document and not mandated. This is due to the level and complexity of local government services, especially in rural and remote areas.

"Local government Integrated Planning and Reporting needs to be conducted at a regional level to influence State Government policy and service delivery."

There should be a requirement for regional cooperation in the development of IPR documents, however this can only be achieved if there some alignment with election cycles and longer term focus.

YES.

Problems with Corporate Business Plans. Tend to favour the Staff input. Plus sometimes they are drafted THEN fed into the Community Strategic Plan. ie. sneaky organisation getting their career 'goals' in.

Need use categories of: major roads, local roads, bridges, rail crossings, parks, regional parks, libraries, leisure centres, public pools.

All local governments must report on them -Qualitative detail.

Dept Local Government work with Other State Agencies for the measures/reporting so burden not on one state agency. Try for the 'expert' state agency. to fact check, etc.

Introduction

The Integrated Planning and Reporting requirements as they currently stand under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1995 do very little for the long term sustainability of local governments. They simply create an additional burden for staff and Councillors and do even less for the community in terms of setting a long term direction and awareness.

The current framework provides a sound basis for the longer term direction of a local government but very little is done to stick to the longer term plans. In fact, many local governments simply pay lip service to both the Community Strategic Plan and the Corporate Business Plan and simply focus on the annual budget which is often not reflective of the longer term focus.

In some cases the aspiration documents also do not closely align to the Long Term Finance Plan which results in large variations between the long term financial forecasts and large variations in terms of rate increases year on year. This not only undermines the long term strategic planning but results in a lack of transparency from a community perspective on projects and funding.

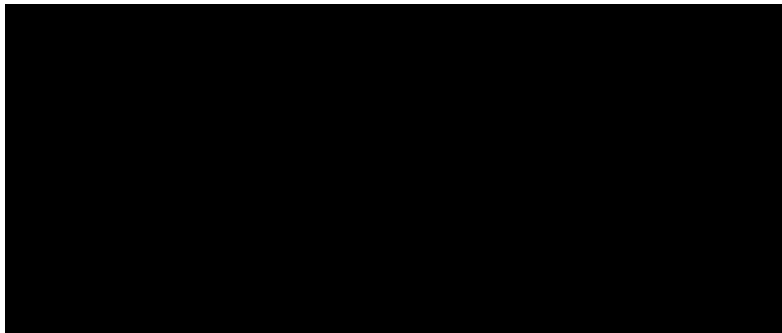

Potential amendments

In order to provide some additional rigour to the IPRF process, it would be appropriate to adopt changes which would ensure longer term planning and funding could be achieved through a consultative and transparent process.

- 1) This would be supported by the inclusion of a long term rating strategy which would need to be adopted by absolute majority, and could only be varied following further community consultation.
2. Motion to amend by absolute majority
3. Community consultation for 28 days outlining the reasons for the changes and the implications for both ratepayers and the services/projects being delivered and must meet/exceed the numbers of community consulted/engaged for the original development of the plan.
4. Community must be advised of the changes being proposed and the budget items to be removed or added which have resulted in the changes being required.
5. Following consultation all submissions must be addressed and responded to and placed on the Council website
6. Council then must publish the reasons and implications of the final changes being adopted.

The rationale for the above matters is to allow for long term planning which is aligned to both rate income and asset management and prevents year on year variations aligned to election cycles. It would also ensure that the longer term financial position of the Council could be more effectively managed and monitored. Finally, it would also give the community a clear indication of where the rate increases are planned for the next few years allowing the community to better plan as well.

Alignment of the review of the rating strategy with the major review of the Community Plan would help to ensure consistency with the community aspirations.
